HERE'S the SCOOP

October 30-November 3

Look What We're Learning

Reading: We begin our three week study of visualizing and inferencing. Visualizing is when a reader uses the author's words to create a "movie" in their mind. A reader uses all of their senses to visualize. When a reader infers, they "read between the lines". A reader uses the author's words and their own background knowledge about a subject to help them understand what the author is saying.

Math: Multiplication is an ongoing skill we practice daily in the classroom. Students will also be working on multiples (skip counting), finding the factors of a number, and understanding the difference between prime and composite numbers.

Grammar & Writing: We continue to work on our Native American projects. The students have begun taking their research and writing what they have learned into paragraphs.

Vocabulary: Our vocabulary words this week will include words with the prefixes ex-, non-, and in-. A complete list of the vocabulary words are on the back of this newsletter. The test will be on Friday.

Parent/Teacher Conferences

Your child should be bringing home a letter about parent conferences today if they haven't already done so. We are asking parents to choose a block of time to meet with their child's teacher on Wednesday, November 15th. Please send back the conference letters by the end of the week. You will receive an official conference time sometime next week. Please send back the conference letters as soon as possible.
